FRAME WORLD PREMIÈRE

How does the architectural mind work? What inspires and frustrates architects and how do they see space differently from others? In this new work, multi-award winning architect Michelle Fagan (FKL Architects), choreographer Ríonach Ní Néill and film-maker Marek Bogacki explore the architectural imagination and creative process, reflecting on our experience of the built environment as something made as much of ideas and emotions as of material.

CUAIRTEOIREACHT - The Rambling House Performance, Installation, Music

Looking to a past and future in a place that doesn’t yet have one, we revisit and reawaken the tradition of the rambling house in a Galway ghost estate. Traditional forms, including Straw Boys, a house céili and sean-nós dance, meld with contemporary, site-specific dance works, installations and art works, including Cindy Cummings & Andrew Duggan’s 9.8 meters per second, to create an exciting and inspiring night in which you, the audience, are a vital player.
